Outstanding Educator 2014

Carol Rolheiser

Professor Carol Rolheiser is the director of the University of Toronto's Centre for Teaching Support & Innovation (CTSI). She is a professor in the Department of Curriculum, Teaching and Learning, and former Associate Dean, Teacher Education at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, University of Toronto. As a dynamic leader in educational change, Carol integrates her research in education with her K-12 experience as an elementary school teacher, school administrator and district consultant, and her experience as a higher education instructor in both undergraduate and graduate education. Carol's research interests span K-12 and higher education, including: teacher education and teacher development; teaching in higher education; instructional and assessment innovation, school improvement; education/university partnerships; leadership; the design, implementation and evaluation of professional development initiatives; system reform and managing educational change. Her inquiry and field development activities have resulted in extensive contributions to books, journal articles, reports and pedagogical resource materials.

Carol's partnership and capacity-building approaches to educational change have had a direct impact on teaching and learning in schools in Ontario and Alberta, in particular, and have contributed to significant pedagogical innovations in schools, school systems, and educational organizations across Canada, the United States, Australia, and Central and Eastern Europe.

For her exemplary teaching, she has been awarded the Canadian College of Teachers' Teacher of the Year Award in 1988 and OISE/UT's Student Teacher Union Award for Teaching Excellence in 1999. She is the past recipient of the inaugural President's Teaching Award (2006), the highest honour for teaching at the University of Toronto, and was established as a member of the University of Toronto's Teaching Academy, providing leadership for teaching and contributing to the advancement of teaching.

Carol's passion for teaching is at the core of her professional work.
